Original version adopted by the FDI General Assembly: 2005, Montreal, Canada

1

2 CONTEXT

3 FDI recognizes the important contribution of volunteers to socio-economic, medical, dental
4 and intellectual developments worldwide. Their engagement in addressing disparities in 5 health status, economic status and in bridging gaps between different populations and
6 countries are highly valued and encouraged wherever possible.

7

8 SCOPE

9 This FDI Policy Statement covers the principles of ethical conduct for volunteer dentists
10 and organizations employing volunteers who are urged to adapt them to their respective 11 context and to promote them among other volunteers and organizations.<sup>1</sup>

12

13 DEFINITION

14 Dental volunteer: A qualified and registered/licensed dentist who provides time and work
15 free of charge.

16

17 PRINCIPLES

18 To ensure that any volunteer dentist's activity related to oral health should be to evaluate 19 and improve the oral health status of the population served within available means and to 20 promote the availability of oral healthcare on a continuing basis through sustained 21 activities.

22

23 POLICY

24 FDI calls upon all stakeholders to uphold the following:

25 • Encourage volunteers to work in an established programme or project, i.e. one that 26 is integrated into the host community and recognized by national governments, the 27 national dental association or other health professional organizations.

28 • To provide appropriate professional indemnity for volunteers and insurance against 29 public liability, personal loss or injury.

30 • Proper planning, reporting and evaluation are essential for the success of a project

- 31 and need to be respected.
- 32 • When establishing a new project, support and guidance by experienced colleagues
- 33 or experts, preferably from the local region, should be obtained.
- 34 • Volunteer programmes should ensure appropriate follow-up arrangements are in
- 35 place for any patients to receive dental treatment subsequent to emergency care
- 36 and service provision. Follow-up arrangements are important aspects of volunteer
- 37 activities and unrealistic expectations should not be encouraged.
- 38 • Volunteer programmes should ensure their long-term impact and sustainability,
- 39 e.g. through training local personnel and the introduction of preventive measures.
- 40

41 Volunteer dentists are called upon:

- 42 • to be aware of the Code of Ethics for the Dental Profession<sup>2</sup> and to apply it in every
- 43 situation and every setting;
- 44 • to be ambassadors of goodwill and to represent the dental profession as a whole;
- 45 • to display professional behaviour and maintain ethical conduct;
- 46 • never to act alone, outside a known or established programme of care, or fail to
- 47 notify the appropriate authorities;
- 48 • to comply with the legal requirements for the practice of dentistry in the selected
- 49 jurisdiction including the holding of required qualifications;
- 50 • to consult with the local professional body or public health service prior to
- 51 introducing new materials and equipment, as these may not be useful in a particular
- 52 context, may not meet local or national standards, and may not be possible to
- 53 maintain;
- 54 • to respect the regulations and culture of the host community;
